I KU NO I KA MĀNA A KE KAHU HANAI

TRAITS ACQUIRED FROM THOSE WHO RAISE A CHILD

24th Annual Convention
November 10, 11, 12, 1983
Keauhou, Hawaii
THE CONVENTION THEME

"I KU NO I KA MĀNA A KE KAHU HANAI"
(TRAITS ACQUIRED FROM THOSE WHO RAISE A CHILD)

Young people reflect the attitudes and characteristics of those who raise them. The Kahu Hanai, who feeds the child with his fingers (mana ai) or from his mouth (pu‘a) supposedly transfers his qualities to the child through this contact. As the child grows, these qualities become strengthened and fixed. The individual takes on the likeness of his Kahu. The Kahu has the tremendous influence and responsibility for either good or bad upon the young life he is moulding. Later in life when the person, now grown, starts a family of his own, these qualities are passed on to his children or the new generation.

When the young people do wrong, those responsible for the youths cast the blame on society. Actually, it all started in the poi bowl. "I ku no i ka mana a ke Kahu Hanai". In these times when we see and hear so much about what our young people do, we need to pause and find some way to help our young people develop qualities that make them better men and women in today’s complex world.

By way of comparing a person and the lehua: like the lehua, both grow. The Kahu Hanai nurtures the child. Wahine Kapu (Pele) nurtures hope (the lehua). In his youth the individual is beautiful, physically like the liko (young shoots) and the exotic flowers of the lehua. Eventually, the lehua goes to seed and propagates its species. Likewise in maturity, a human begats his own kind.

"I KU NO I KA MĀNA A KE KAHU HANAI"

Aloha Kākou,

Welcome to the Twenty-Fourth Annual Convention. Mahalo to all of you for your prayers, cards, letters and get well wishes during my recent illness.

One year has past since I was elected as your President, and I must admit it has been a year of learning and a joy in experiencing your camaraderie. I'd like to thank all of you for your cooperation and understanding.

I have learned that the Hawaiian people have changed and yet still manage to remain the same, moving into the modern times but still holding on to our unique ways.

In support of our theme for this convention, "I Ku No I Ka Māna A Ke Kahu Hanai", we have been able to reflect the attitudes and characteristics of those who raised us. With this and education we can move in great stride in this complex world. I hope that all of you continue to support your scholarship programs.

Me ke-āloha pumehana,

The Stuff of Legends

From the day a Polynesian explorer set foot on the Kona Coast to become the first Hawaiian, legends have abounded here—the area known as Keauhou-Kona, on the island of Hawaii. Captain Cook, the first European to come, recognized it as the center of Hawaiian spiritual and political power. Its traces are still visible: ancient petroglyphs carved in rough lava rock; the sacred City of Refuge; the fiery domain of Pele, the Volcano Goddess.

Today Keauhou-Kona, at the center of this legendary coast, retains its magnetism. With three hotels the rival of any. Eight plush condominiums. Big game hunting and deep-sea fishing. 18 tennis courts and 18 holes of championship golf. A complete Convention Center. And the best weather in all the islands.

ACTIVITIES AND ACHIEVEMENTS
Has continued to meet the dictates of the Charter to the AOHCC and Oahu Council. We have attended all sanctioned events of our council and AOHCC. Our main thrust has been keeping members informed and providing educable programs and newsletters. This task was carried out well by the chairpersons. A most important function has been providing scholarships to our children from Kindergarten to post graduate schools. The explorations program of Kamehameha Schools was also honored for our 5th graders. Our choral group has been active under the able leadership of Director, Les P. Caballos. We salute and welcome this year’s convention theme!
